

Item Descriptions

These are a few item descriptions from my ongoing D&D campaign set in a 100-floor videogame world called The Spire: RPG. Items are intentionally zany and rule-breaking to remind the players they're inside of a video game. All items were made using Foundry.

GREAT TORCH

Uncommon

x 1 100
250

DESCRIPTION DETAILS ACTIVITIES EFFECTS

Description

The Great Torch is a 10 foot diameter, 15 foot tall pillar of wood wrapped with an oil-soaked blanket at its apex. When aligned perpendicular to the earth, it will shed bright light within a 250 foot radius, and dim light within 500 feet. In addition, it creates a beacon of light visible on a clear day within 3 miles that stretches into the clouds. It can burn indefinitely with magical flame in this way.

As an action, you can use the torch's command word, "Burn", when the beacon is visible to cast the Wall of Fire spell in a radius around the Great Torch. Doing so will destroy the torch and render it an unusable pile of ash.

CTRL+++C

Tool • Rare

x 1
0
0

DESCRIPTION DETAILS ACTIVITIES EFFECTS

Description

This item appears to be a toy, plastic wand of bright colors.

As a magic action, you can use Ctrl+++C to create a copy of any item. However, that item will lack all functional abilities. The facsimile will be made of a thin, easily breakable material, but feels like the real thing without further inspection.

3 charges; 3 time use.

WHO'S WHATSIT PATCH PACK

Container • Common

x 1
0.1
150

CONTENTS DESCRIPTION DETAILS

Description

A small leather pouch containing three patches for restocking the Robe of Useful items, created and designed by store owner Who of Who's Whatsits. Patches can be sewn onto the Robe of Useful items and subsequently removed for a variety of effects, hinted at by the imagery on the patch.

There are 5 rarities: Common, Uncommon, Rare, Epic, and Legendary.

Can you collect them all?